PERKALATE / BRAND STRATEGY

How an online brand can reach shoppers it hasn’t met

Choose one new customer audience and give them a clear reason to try you.

Your own list is a useful place to build repeat business. Reaching first-time shoppers takes a different starting point. Look for people who already buy in your category, then give them one specific reason to try your brand.

Describe the shopper with observable behavior

Start with the habits your good customers share before they buy. Examples include recent category spend or a relevant membership customers choose to share. Exclude people who already purchase from you if your goal is acquisition.

Offer a useful first experience

A sample, starter bundle, or shipping perk can remove a specific reason to hesitate. Give the offer a short explanation, a clear eligibility rule, a budget cap and one place to redeem it.

Measure the first and second order

Track how many eligible people saw, claimed and used the offer. Compare new orders with a similar group that did not receive it. Check whether those buyers return within a sensible window for your product.